PART I

ITEM 1. DESCRIPTION OF BUSINESS

General

Inventoy.com, Inc. was incorporated August 11, 1999 in the state of Delaware. We seek to license toy designs to toy manufacturers and to act as a toy inventor's agent in licensing toy designs developed by others. Our licensing efforts will begin with 27 toy designs which we acquired from Kaplan Design Group, a New Jersey general partnership. Our president, Ed Kaplan, is a ten percent partner of Kaplan Design Group and his sons Douglas Kaplan, our Secretary, and Michael Kaplan are each forty-five percent partners. We expect to market these toy designs by both direct meetings with toy manufacturers' representatives and through a web site that will give the manufacturers an opportunity to review pictures and descriptions of new inventions at a single source to decide whether a face-to-face meeting would be useful. In both face-to-face meetings and disclosure of toy designs over the Internet, a submission sheet will be used that describes the toy design and who the authorized manufacturer is who is viewing the toy design. We have had no operations to date.

Initially we will look at the toy design concept to see if it makes sense or has been done before. Then we will evaluate the toy design to determine if it is something we think a toy manufacturer and retailer can and would manufacture and market. Then we will evaluate whether the toy design is expandable into a brand, whether it may be suitable for a series of related toys.

Industry Background

We believe that the business of most toy companies relies on the continuing development of new products as well as the redesigning of existing products for continuing market acceptance. We believe that the leading toy companies maintain a staff of designers, artists, model makers and engineers, and that much of this work is performed by that staff internally. However, we believe that most leading toy manufacturers also deal with a number of independent toy designers.

We believe that in recent years, the toy industry has experienced rapid consolidation. This is in part because the manufacturers want to offer a range of products across a broader variety of categories. The toy industry is also experiencing a shift toward greater consolidation of retail distribution channels, such as large specialty toy stores and discount retailers, including Toys R Us, Wal-Mart, Kmart and Target, which have increased their overall share of the retail market. Large retailers in turn are relying more and more on the large toy companies because of their financial stability and ability to support products through advertising and promotion and to distribute products on a national basis.

We believe that the larger toy companies have pursued a strategy of focusing on core product lines. Core product lines are those lines that are expected to be marketed for an extended period of time, and that historically provided relatively consistent growth in sales and profitability. By focusing on core product lines, toy manufacturers have been able to reduce their reliance on new product introductions and the associated risk and volatility. The combination of fewer manufacturers and decreased emphasis on new designs rather than the tried and true means that the independent toy inventor has fewer and fewer outlets for his inventions, and that each outlet is larger and therefore more difficult to "break into." We believe that these trends make the role of the inventor's agent increasingly important if a new design is to reach the marketplace. Larger manufacturers, particularly, maintain large internal development staffs, and getting a new idea before the decision-makers increasingly require an introduction by someone with a track record in the industry.

We believe that rights to designs and ideas developed by independent toy designers are usually acquired on an exclusive basis. Licensing agreements generally require the manufacturer to pay the designer a royalty on the manufacturer's net sales of the item. The royalty agreements usually also provide for advance royalties and minimum guarantees to the designer.

The Role of a Toy Inventor's Agent

We believe that the vast majority of new toy designs developed outside the large toy manufacturers are developed by professional toy inventors. However, a significant number of new designs do come from amateur inventors. Some of these inventors may have developed only a single product, and most of them don't have experience in dealing with toy manufacturers. We believe that for a variety of reasons the major toy manufacturers prefer to deal through a broker in negotiating arrangements with amateur inventors. We believe that many amateur inventors often suspect that the manufacturer may "steal" his or her invention once it is disclosed. However, often when a concept is presented to a toy manufacturer, the manufacturer has seen the idea before or has developed itself. The manufacturer will state this, usually in writing on a disclosure form. Toy agents and professional inventors are accustomed to this process; and there is a level of trust. We believe that an amateur, on the other hand, often doesn't trust the toy manufacturer and may think his or her idea has been stolen if it shows up on toy shelves the next year. The result is often a lawsuit with the toy manufacturer being portrayed as the "big company" against the "little guy." There is always a risk that a jury will side with the "little guy" no matter what the facts may be. An experienced toy agent is accustomed to the process by which existing inventions are disclosed and as an outsider can explain to the new inventor that if a toy manufacturer steals ideas from toy agents and professional inventors the manufacturer will stop having access to new ideas from this important source.

In addition, we believe that the inventor may have unrealistic expectations concerning the potential value of his invention or may underestimate the amount of additional, development plans required to bring to market. The professional toy agent is familiar with the process of developing the invention from the initial idea through the completion of a prototype. The toy agent also knows the prevailing amounts of royalties and other practices in the industry. The toy agent can independently confirm to the inventor the problems that may be facing the manufacturer in bringing the idea to market, or, if appropriate, persuade the manufacturer that a higher royalty is appropriate.

Sources of Revenue

We expect to earn money primarily from two sources. First, we will seek to license the inventory of 27 toy designs we currently have and possibly additional designs that may be developed by Ed Kaplan in the future. Second, we will receive a portion of the royalties paid to the inventors we expect to represent as agent. Additionally, we will also seek revenue from the sale of banner ads on the web page we are planning to create. We expect that any revenue from the sale of banner ads to be minimal.

We believe that toy inventors usually are paid for their inventions through a royalty on sales of the products they design. We believe that typical royalties range from 3% to 10% of the wholesale price charged by the manufacturer, with most royalties falling at or near 5%. The royalty is based on the price the manufacturer charges to its customers -- usually the wholesale cost. Manufacturers also pay advances, sometimes called earnest money, to show that they are committed to the idea. Usually the advance is based on the royalties that would be earned in the first quarter of shipments. We believe that typically the advance ranges from $5,000 to $50,000. The advance is subtracted from future royalties. Generally, royalties are paid quarterly.

Where we are licensing our own inventions, we will receive the entire royalty. Where we are acting as a broker for another inventor, our percentage will be subject to negotiation with the inventor. We believe that it will generally range from 40% to 50% of the royalty received by the inventor, with the actual percentage negotiated on a case-by-case basis depending upon, among other things, the amount of assistance we have to give the inventor in order to bring his product to a marketable state.

Selection Criteria

Toy designs for which we will act as agent will be selected based primarily on our judgment of the chances of their achieving commercial success and yielding significant royalties. Considerations will include how unique the toy design is, the likelihood of getting meaningful patent protection, the amount of any additional work required to bring the designs to a production stage and management's subjective "feel" for whether the design is in line with current consumer desires. These same considerations will affect the prominence we give to a particular design on our Web pages and the degree of effort put into marketing that design to toy manufacturers.

Importance of Relationships and Reputation

Edgar Filing: INVENTOY COM INC - Form 10KSB

We believe that one of the most important factors that will make our business succeed or fail is the reputation of our president. One of the key hurdles faced by any independent toy inventor is getting his design before the appropriate decision maker at the manufacturer's level. We believe that an inventor with an established track record in the field is far more likely to be able to get the attention of these decision makers in order to present new designs. In addition, our experience is that knowing the key decision makers on a personal level goes a long way toward successfully arranging a personal meeting to present new designs. Our president, Ed Kaplan, has been a toy manufacturing executive for 26 years and ran a toy design company for 16 years, and is well known to most of the major toy manufacturers.

ITEM 6. MANAGEMENT'S DISCUSSION AND ANALYSIS OF FINANCIAL CONDITION AND RESULTS OF OPERATIONS

The following discussion contains forward-looking statements involving risks and uncertainties based on our current expectations and the development of our business. All statements in this registration statement related to our intended business plans, prospective financial operations and expected future growth or profitability constitute forward-looking statements. Forward-looking statements are subject to a number of risks and uncertainties. Our actual results may differ significantly from those anticipated or expressed in these statements. You should read the following discussion and analysis in conjunction with the audited financial statements (and notes thereto) and other financial information of our company appearing elsewhere in this report.

Overview

Inventoy was incorporated on August 11, 1999, and seeks to license toy designs to toy manufacturers and to act as a toy inventor's agent in licensing toy designs developed by others. Additionally Inventoy will seek revenue from the sale of banner ads on the web page it plans to create. However, the expectation is that any revenue from the sale of banner ads will be minimal. Inventoy's licensing efforts begin with twenty-seven toy designs which were acquired from Kaplan Design Group, a New Jersey general partnership. Inventoy expects to market those toy designs by both direct meetings with toy manufacturers' representatives as well as through a website that will give the manufacturers an opportunity to review pictures and descriptions of new inventions at a single source to decide whether a fact-to-face meeting would be useful.

Inventoy's plan of operations for the next twelve months includes hiring a web designer to build Inventoy's web page, and soliciting new toy designs. The web page will take approximately four months build and cost approximately $25,000. We plan to hire a web designer later this year. We will rely on Ed Kaplan and Doug Kaplan's contacts in the toy industry to solicit new toy designs. We plan for the web page to also solicit new toy designs. Also, during the next twelve months Ed Kaplan will market Inventoy's current toy designs directly to toy manufactures' representatives.

From its inception to the time of filing this registration statement, Inventoy has been developing its business and had no operations. Inventory believes that it will not need to raise additional funds in the next twelve months.

Intellectual Property

We have no trademark, copyright or patent protection at this time. None of the designs we own are protected by patent protection. Generally, while some toy designs may be entitled to patent protection, the majority of toy designs will not meet the criteria for a utility patent protection. Some designs may be eligible for a limited degree of protection provided by design patents. However, in general most designs are protected only under the law of trade secrets. Under the law of trade secrets, the secret is legally protected only for so long as it is not disclosed to others other than by someone under an obligation to maintain its secrecy.

Competition

We expect to face intense competition both in our efforts to market new toy inventions to toy manufacturers and in our efforts to get new inventor customers for whom we can act as agent. There are several other companies seeking to assist toy inventors, one of the more successful companies is Haystack Toy Company. Insofar as marketing toy designs to the manufacturers is concerned, the major competition will be from the manufacturers' own in-house design departments. There are also approximately 150 independent toy design companies, many of which are sole proprietorships. The principal bases on which industry participants compete is on the perceived value of the toy design concept and the likelihood of it being manufactured and marketed.

Notes to Financial Statements

1. Nature of Business

Inventoy.Com, Inc. (the "Company"), ("Inventoy") was incorporated on August 11, 1999, seeks to license toy designs to toy manufacturers and to act as a toy inventor's agent in licensing toy designs developed by others. Additionally the company will seek revenue from the sale of banner ads on the web page it plans to create. However, the expectation is that any revenue from the sale of banner ads will be minimal. Inventoy's licensing efforts began with twenty-seven toy designs, which were acquired from Kaplan Design Group ("KDG"), a New Jersey general partnership. The Company expects to market those toy designs by both direct meetings with toy manufacturers' representatives as well as through a website that will give the manufacturers an opportunity to review pictures and descriptions of new inventions at a single source to decide whether a face-to-face meeting would be useful.

Edgar Filing: INVENTOY COM INC - Form 10KSB

From inception through July 31, 2001, the Company has been in the developmental stage, developing its business plans, acquiring toy designs and raising capital. There have been no operations or revenues since inception.

2. Significant Accounting Policies

Use of Estimates

The preparation of financial statements in conformity with generally accepted accounting principles required management to make estimates and assumptions that affect the reported amounts of assets, liabilities and matters for disclosure at the date of the financial statements, and the reported amounts of revenue and expenses during the reporting period. Actual results could differ from those estimates.

Purchased Toy Designs

During the fiscal year ended July 31, 2000 the Company acquired twenty-seven toy designs from Kaplan Design Group (KDG). The Company issued 3,000,000 shares of common stock at par value ($3,000) in consideration. The value of the toy designs represents KDG's out-of-pocket cost of acquiring them. Upon commencement of selling activity, these toy design costs will be amortized over the useful life of the designs, not to exceed three years, unless management determines sooner that the value of a design is impaired, in which case it is charged off to operations.

Accrual Basis

The financial statements have been prepared on the accrual basis of accounting. Revenues are reflected when earned and expenses are recognized when incurred.

The Company has reviewed Securities and Exchange Commission Staff Accounting Bulletin ("SAB") No. 101, "Revenue Recognition in Financial Statements," and its effect on the recognition licensing fee revenue. At July 31, 2001 The Company has not entered into any written or oral licensing agreements with third parties. The Company only expects to make written licensing agreements in the future. Revenue from these third parties will be recognized only when the terms of the written contracts are satisfied.

Financial Instruments

Current assets and liabilities are reported at their face amount, which because of their short-term nature, approximates fair value.

Income Taxes

Edgar Filing: INVENTOY COM INC - Form 10KSB

The Company uses the liability method for income taxes as required by SFAS No. 109 "Accounting for Income Taxes." Under this method, deferred tax assets and liabilities are determined based on differences between financial reporting and tax basis of assets and liabilities. Deferred tax assets and liabilities are measured using enacted tax rates and laws that will be in effect when the differences are expected to reverse.

Other

Startup expenses including organization costs and certain website development costs are charged to operations as incurred.

Dividends

The Company does not expect to pay cash dividends on its common stock in the foreseeable future. The intent is to retain any earnings to develop and extend its business.

Comprehensive Loss

There is no difference in the Company's historical net losses as reported and the comprehensive net losses for all periods presented.

Net Income Per Share

Basic net income per share is computed by dividing net income (after deducting dividends, if any, declared on preferred stock) by the weighted average number of common shares outstanding for the period.

3. Shareholders' Equity

As of July 31, 2000 all of Inventoy's contributed capital was provided by three shareholders who held one hundred percent of Inventoy's shares. Kaplan Design Group, a New Jersey general partnership, owned eighty-three (83) percent of Inventoy's outstanding common stock and Ed Kaplan and his son, Douglas Kaplan were each eight and one-half (8 1/2) percent owners. Both Ed and Douglas Kaplan are also principal owners in Kaplan Design Group. The capital contributed by Kaplan Design Group was in exchange for twenty-seven toy designs that Inventoy is now trying to license. See related party transactions.

Edgar Filing: INVENTOY COM INC - Form 10KSB

In addition, 250,000 shares were each issued in October 2000 to Kaplan, Gottbetter & Levenson LLP in exchange for legal services and in December 2000 to Dunlap Industries, Ltd. for advisory services in connection with planned private and public placements of stock. These shares are shown as if they were already issued, so as to reflect the transaction as though it were completed prior to July 31, 2000. These shares were issued at the value, of the legal services and advisory services that were performed. Dunlap will also advise the Company on proposed business combination matters through December of 2001.

In August 2000, Inventoy's Board of Directors authorized a private placement offering of Inventory's common stock to a limited number of sophisticated investors at a price of $.10 per share. By July 31 2001, Inventoy completed the private placement of 1,111,000 shares of common stock, resulting in cash proceeds of $111,100. Holders of common stock are entitled to one vote for each share held on all matters submitted to a vote of stockholders and do not have cumulative voting rights. The deferred offering expenses were charged against the proceeds of this offering.

4. Related Party Transactions

In July of 2000, an agreement was made by which The Company acquired twenty-seven toy designs from KDG in exchange for 3,000,000 shares of its common stock. KDG (the principal shareholder of Inventoy) is a New Jersey general partnership of which Ed Kaplan (Inventoy's president and shareholder) owns ten (10) percent and his sons Douglas Kaplan (Inventory's secretary and shareholder) and Michael Kaplan each own forty-five (45) percent. KDG acquired these toy designs from Ed Kaplan Associates ("EKA"). KDG does not have any operations. EKA is a New Jersey general partnership of which Inventoy's president, Ed Kaplan owns ten (10) percent and his son's Douglas Kaplan, Michael Kaplan and Steven Kaplan each own thirty (30) percent. EKA designs toys and markets toy designs to toy manufacturers. Ed Kaplan will continue to work at EKA part time for approximately twenty hours per month. EKA does not represent the toy designs of others, unlike Inventoy's business plan.
