SGL Carbon to file an appeal with the European Court - specialty graphite case is no new matter

WIESBADEN, Germany--(BUSINESS WIRE)--December 17, 2002. Within the context of the well-known investigations into the graphite industry, which have been ongoing since 1997, the European Commission today issued its decision against graphite industry companies in specialty graphites and announced corresponding fines.

Although financial markets expected higher fines, SGL Carbon considers the fine of (euro) 27.75 million imposed is unjustified and will therefore file a second appeal with the European Court. As repeatedly reported, there are no new facts in this case. The case - also mentioned in today's announcement of the EU Commission - is linked to the European Commission's investigations into the graphite industry, which have been ongoing since 1997, and which led to the well-publicized decision to impose fines in the area of graphite electrodes in July 2001. SGL Carbon appealed against this previous fine to the European Court, in particular on the grounds of unlawful double jeopardy (ne bis in idem principle) as well as gross disproportionality. In view of the penalties already imposed and the fact that it concerns the same events during the same period of time and in the same environment, SGL Carbon is of the opinion that the European Commission is not entitled to impose a further fine upon the Company and is confident that this opinion will be confirmed by the court.
