Manager Talking Points

We know people will have a lot of questions about the new American. In addition to the resources available for all employees on new Jetnet, as well as the manager resources available to you on classic Jetnet, please feel free to use the below talking points to guide your conversations with your team members.

WHAT WILL THE NEW AIRLINE LOOK LIKE?

This is an historic day for us. American and US Airways have agreed to join together to create the new American Airlines – a premier global carrier.

We will have an expanded global network, a strong financial foundation, a modern, efficient fleet and the industry's best people.

In all, we will have more than 6,700 daily flights to 336 destinations in 56 countries across the globe.

We expect to keep all hubs now served by both airlines and expand service in non-hub cities, providing more travel options for our customers and more opportunity for our people.

The new American's headquarters will be in Dallas-Fort Worth, with the combined company also keeping a significant presence in Phoenix.

WHAT DOES THIS MEAN FOR OUR PEOPLE?

Employees of the combined airline will benefit from being part of a company with a more competitive and stable financial foundation. This will lead to more opportunities for our team.

Upon completion of the merger, we will have an even greater ability to invest in our business. We plan to continue to introduce new products and technologies to deliver a comfortable, connected travel experience for our customers.

We will be in a better position to compete and win against Delta, United and other global carriers, which means long-term stability and career growth for our people. The merger creates a path for improved compensation and benefits and more opportunities for all employees.

Our hard work at restructuring over the course of the last year made our airline better and stronger. We accomplished a great deal in a very short amount of time. We now have real momentum as we move to improve our operations, renew the fleet and modernize our airline. These strengths provide a solid foundation for us to move forward and reclaim industry leadership.

We expect the merger to close in the third quarter of 2013, once we secure the various regulatory and US Airways stockholder approvals and Bankruptcy Court approval of our Plan of Reorganization. And using previous airline mergers as a guide, the entire process to integrate the two companies, departments, operations and workforces will take a year or two after closing to complete.

In the immediate future, there won't be a lot of big changes. We will continue to operate as separate carriers. The most important thing we can all do now is keep our focus on our customers and take care of each other.

A successful merger requires a successful integration, which will take time and effort. Between now and closing of the merger, a transition team made up of people from both airlines will develop a carefully constructed integration process to help ensure a smooth transition.

Additional information on this process and other merger news and developments are available on new Jetnet, which will be updated regularly.

WHY THIS, WHY NOW?

We have many reasons to be proud of our accomplishments and optimistic about our future. The investments we've made in a new look, new fleet, new products, and new technology and tools give us a strong start.

American's many strengths, combined with the significant progress we've made in our restructuring, allowed us to shape a deal that works. Many experienced financial analysts, including American's advisors, have evaluated the potential of the merger, and have concluded that it will deliver real value to our financial stakeholders, our partners and our people.

The stakeholders of our company, including the Unsecured Creditors Committee, the Ad Hoc Committee, and our Board of Directors, have looked at this combination from top to bottom and determined that this is the best path forward. They wouldn't have pursued this merger if they didn't think it would create more value for everyone.

The two airlines, combined, create a stronger whole with the potential to generate more than $1 billion in annual net synergies, including new revenues through:

Improved flight schedules and connections, increasing efficiency and offering more travel options to our customers

A superior network and frequent flyer program that makes us a strong competitor for global corporate accounts and high-value customers

Further strengthening of American's industry-leading position in the Caribbean and Latin America

A leading position in the important business markets on the East Coast, including the US Airways Shuttle

The ability to better match aircraft to specific markets for increased profitability

Enhanced connectivity with oneworld Alliance partners, including international joint businesses

Now is the time to focus on the work ahead and put our best efforts into a smooth integration. That will mean adapting to change even as we continue to run a great operation and keep our customers safe and happy.

We have to be united in our focus on our customers to make this transition as seamless as possible. That's the only way we'll be able to fully realize the merger's potential and the benefits it will bring.

Many will be watching—particularly our competitors—as we move forward. We need to show them that the new American is a force to be reckoned with, and can't let anything distract us from our focus on our customers as we work toward making the new American the best airline in the world. Thank you for your dedication to making that goal a reality.
