Nokia Litigation Update.

On March 5, 2009, the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York dismissed with prejudice the first and second counts of Nokia Corporation's three-count complaint against InterDigital, Inc. and its wholly-owned subsidiaries InterDigital Technology Corporation and InterDigital Communications, LLC (collectively, "InterDigital"), in which Nokia Corporation had sought to (i) preliminarily enjoin InterDigital from proceeding with the United States International Trade Commission ("USITC") investigation with respect to Nokia Corporation and Nokia, Inc. (collectively, "Nokia") and (ii) compel the parties to arbitrate Nokia's alleged patent license defense. The District Court agreed with InterDigital's position that the finding by the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit that Nokia had waived any right to arbitrate is binding on the District Court. In the same Order, the District Court also granted a motion by InterDigital to dismiss without prejudice the third and final count of Nokia Corporation's complaint, an alternative claim for a declaratory judgment that Nokia is licensed under the patents asserted by InterDigital against Nokia in the USITC investigation. In the USITC proceeding with respect to Nokia, InterDigital alleges that Nokia engaged in an unfair trade practice by making for importation into the United States, importing, and selling after importation into the United States certain 3G mobile handsets and components that infringe four of InterDigital's patents.

On March 10, 2009, the Administrative Law Judge (the "ALJ") overseeing the USITC proceeding with respect to Nokia granted InterDigital's motion for summary determination that InterDigital has established, through its licensing activities, that a domestic industry exists in the United States as required to obtain relief before the USITC.

The evidentiary hearing for the USITC investigation with respect to Nokia remains scheduled for May 26-29, 2009. A final Initial Determination by the ALJ is expected by August 14, 2009, and the Final Determination by the USITC is expected by December 14, 2009.
