Elbit Systems to Supply an Asian Customer with Live Training System Valued at $10 Million

Live Training System allows the trainee to acquire experience and skills in field conditions while saving training time and ammunition costs

Haifa, Israel, December 1, 2008 – Elbit Systems Ltd. (NASDAQ:ESLT) announced that it was awarded a contract by an Asian country for the supply of a “Live Training System” valued at $10 million. The system will be delivered to the customer during 2010.

The new system is designated to train a brigade combat team including infantry forces, armored forces and support forces (artillery and air defense). Virtual elements are integrated into the live training for enriching the battlefield display, as well as video capabilities for improving control and debrief.

Edgar Filing: ELBIT SYSTEMS LTD - Form 6-K

The live training system is mobile and can be rapidly deployed in various training areas with various sizes and features, and enables training in urban scenarios as well. The capability to execute a training activity in the area itself, while utilizing the operational weapons and platforms, without using live ammunition, allows the trainee to acquire experience and skills in field conditions while saving training time and ammunition costs.

Ran Hellerstein, Joint General Manager of Elbit Systems' Aerospace Division said: "Winning this project positions Elbit Systems as a leading supplier in the field of trainers and simulators. We anticipate growing interest among our global clients in acquiring similar systems".

Elbit Systems operates in the Trainers market for all military activity areas, for air, land and sea, in Israel and worldwide. The company relies on its cutting-edge technological capabilities, especially in the software development area for complex systematic projects, and on its worldwide leadership in military platforms upgrade.
