Case IH Magnum Tractor Wins Good Design Award

RACINE, Wis. (October 4, 2007) For the first time in the company's history, Case IH has been honored with a prestigious Good Design Award from The Chicago Athenaeum: Museum of Architecture and Design. The Case IH Magnum tractor was voted one of the winning designs in the transportation category.

Other winners in the category include the NASA Lunar Lander, the Mitsubishi Eclipse Spider, the BMW F800S Motorcycle, the BMW Z4 Coupe, and the Camcopter® S-100 UAV Unmanned Aerial Vehicle.

We were judged against some of the best transportation companies in the world – and out of this world, when you factor in NASA, says Mike Bunnell, one of the company's tractor vehicle engineers who designed the next generation Case IH Magnum tractors. That's pretty impressive competition.

Bunnell says the Magnum won the award because it successfully combines style and extreme functionality. It's stylish and looks great, but it's also a rugged, muscular tractor, he adds. So the design has to integrate a lot of necessary functions, such as air flow, cooling, high visibility and operator comfort, to name just a few. Based on what our customers are telling us – coupled with this renowned Good Design award – we succeeded.

Case IH collaborated with long-time partner Montgomery Design International, industrial design and styling consultants, on the new Magnum tractor. Montgomery Design International also was involved in several earlier Case IH Magnum designs, including the original Magnum tractor, which won the highly prized IDEA Gold Award from the Industrial Designers Society of America.

According to Tom Dean, Case IH North American Marketing Manager for Magnum Tractors, the 2008 model year marks the 20th anniversary of the Magnum tractor. The first Magnum rolled off the production line back in 1988. It was eagerly anticipated as the first new tractor created after the merger of the Case and International Harvester brands two longtime powerhouses in the farm equipment industry and it didn't disappoint, Dean adds.

Today's new generation Magnum tractors lead the industry with their sculpted front hood for tighter turning, and spacious interior cab that's comfortable and stylish, with the industry's largest glass area for optimum visibility. Overall ergonomics include luxury premium leather seats available in Case IH's signature red color, and combination speed control lever, Dean says. We're honored that the Good Design judges found this tractor worthy of such an award.

The Chicago Athenaeum: Museum of Architecture and Design founded the historic Good Design award program in 1950. It remains the oldest, most important design awards program in the world. The Case IH Magnum tractor design was one of several hundred designs submitted in the latest competition.
