Gentlemen:

Per the request of CEO David Mazzella, this letter is a written follow-up summary of comments and concerns that I raised on the company's first quarter conference call of May 12, 2005. I understand that some Board members - hopefully all -- were on that conference call, as the brief quarterly calls remain one of the few opportunities shareholders have to communicate with the Board and management.

Summit Capital is an independent registered investment advisor with a long term value-oriented investment strategy. As with all shareholders, the stock has been a major disappointment for us. According to the most recent proxy, Summit Capital is the largest Veramark shareholder with approximately 1.3 million shares, 15.3% of the issued and outstanding shares. Unfortunately, this percentage ownership is way overstated because it does not count the incredible and incomprehensible dilution that exists because of the Board's issuance of 3,345,303 options (38.5% of all issued shares!) plus an additional 1,584,481 option shares "available for future issuance" (representing an additional 18.2% of all current shares). I know of no company in corporate America which has diluted shareholders to such an extent, and has given away so much shareholder wealth to senior management.

When we first invested in Veramark approximately ten years ago, it was ostensibly a high quality small company whose strong products and management positioned it well in a growing sector of the economy. I recall at one meeting with CEO Mazzella in New York City his comment that Veramark was so valuable and had such a strong future that "I and the Board would only consider a merger proposal if it was over $30 a share." Certainly the past few years have been difficult in the telecom sector but over-promising and under-delivering -- while consistently being over compensated -- has been the hallmark of Mr. Mazzella's long tenure.

Today the stock is 70 cents, the company's operating performance over the past seven years has been dreadful in all respects, shareholders have been nearly wiped out, many once valued employees are now gone, current employee morale and departures continue their dismal trends, shareholders' ownership has been massively diluted, and the prospects of the company and shareholders are questionable at best. In my 30 years as an investment professional -- and after years of reading scores of articles and cases involving corporate mismanagement, excessive compensation, massive option grants to management and the like -- I know of no company which approaches the egregious, unfair and potentially illegal transfer of ownership from shareholders to corporate management that has occurred at Veramark...all on top of excessively high annual "all in" total cash compensation to senior management.

As I communicated on the recent conference call -- and clearly my comments and concerns resonated deeply with other shareholders -- Summit Capital remains incredibly discouraged by a number of key factors, including:

- 1) The poor operating results and outlook reported by the company last week, particularly in light of the optimistic indications that CEO Mazzella had given in reporting the 4th quarter results and the variety of upbeat news releases issued by the company in recent months. As Board members should be acutely aware, this pattern of poor results following optimistic expectations and news releases that highlight orders and wins, has been a consistent hallmark of Veramark and its management team for many years.
Where is the responsibility? Where is the accountability?
- 2) The recent receipt by shareholders of the current proxy statement discloses something the company did not highlight in any press release: a new very excessively generous long term compensation package for Mr. Mazzella. As discussed on the conference call, the fact is that only Mr. Mazzella (and a few other officers to some extent) has benefited at Veramark since his arrival over 7 years ago. Using numbers from the Company's proxy (which likely leave out certain other benefits and compensation), the CEO has received over $2,800,000 in cash compensation; has been issued 900,000 options (including 300,000 at 43 cents!), representing over 10% of the company; and has now received a new contract from the Board that will continue to insure annual cash compensation of over $450,000. In addition to all this and his huge percentage of options, the CEO now has a very excessive and extremely dilutive "change of control" provision that could easily approach $1.5 million in a single payment; plus, a highly dilutive "retirement package" that is excessive and will burden the company's future prospects immeasurably.
- 3) How has the company, its employees and the shareholders done while the CEO has been compensated in a manner fitting the leader of a significant and profitable enterprise?

Edgar Filing: VERAMARK TECHNOLOGIES INC - Form SC 13D

- a) I do not have specifics on employee numbers and turnover and compensation readily at hand. But I'm sure the Board does and a cursory review will indicate that few, if any, Veramark employees have benefited -- and many have lost their jobs during the past seven years as the company has reported net income losses of over $11 million. As for shareholders, the stock has declined over 90% and current prospects appear uncertain, at the least.

- b) Certainly no shareholders (or regular employees) were able to borrow money from the company to buy stock and not have to repay it, as Mr. Mazzella did. And then -- as belatedly and finally disclosed on page 13 of the current proxy statement -- when the stock collapsed under his leadership, he was able to have his $106,000 loan (plus interest and income taxes due on the loan forgiveness) completely written off at shareholders' expense. So much for the very small "salary reduction" that has been mentioned prominently on past occasions (including a reference to it on last week's conference call). Talk about an unfair and deceptive "heads the CEO wins" and "tails the shareholders lose" sweetheart deal!

Gentlemen, it is way past time for the Board of Directors of Veramark to begin to fulfill their legal and fiduciary duty to shareholders. Veramark continues to struggle badly and its prospects under current management remain uncertain at best. The only winner under the current CEO's very long leadership has been Mr. Mazzella and his total cash and option compensation package (including change of control bonuses, retirement, insurance, etc.) is clearly way out of line for a struggling, unprofitable company of Veramark's size.

Fortunately Veramark has some very good products, customers, contracts, R&D And employees--though we and others are concerned over employee departures and deteriorating morale. Given the realities of the economy and telecom sector, it is paramount that the Board immediately acknowledge and assess Veramark's long term track record and current situation under present management, and initiate an immediate and complete review of all strategic alternatives, with the goal of preserving and maximizing whatever value and prospects remain for our company. In fairness to shareholders and employees, the egregious new employment contract with the CEO must be immediately reviewed, reconsidered, and renegotiated by independent third parties and shareholders. The fact is the company desperately needs new leadership and/or a new strategic direction; not a continuation of the current situation.

Given the company's small size, limited resources and the clear ineffectiveness of senior management to create and manage a profitable enterprise, it is paramount for the Board to explore all opportunities before any further diminution of corporate value occurs -- including considering a merger with a larger and better capitalized company, something that could return some value to shareholders and preserve prospects for employees.

The shareholders and employees of Veramark have suffered greatly in recent years, while witnessing the transfer of a great deal of current and future value to the CEO. It is absolutely critical for the Board of Directors to finally effectively and properly represent the owners of this company. If the present Board refuses to do so, we reserve the right to take other actions to preserve and protect shareholder interests, including filing a proxy with a new slate of directors.

I look forward to your timely and effective response.

Sincerely yours,

Edgar Filing: VERAMARK TECHNOLOGIES INC - Form SC 13D
